Sustainable

Materials are what most determine the environmental impact of our clothes, directly contributing to: consumption of water, microplastic pollution, greenhouse gas emissions, soil degradation, rainforest destruction and lastly landfill waste of epic proportions.

By choosing eco-friendly fabrics alone, we're taking a huge step toward a more sustainable wardrobe.

Sustainable fabrics is the textiles that significantly minimizes the impact of its conventional alternatives, whether through organic and chemical-free farming, use of recycled materials, circular manufacturing processes, and sustainable prospects for end-of-life disposal.

Single-use plastics are wreaking havoc on our environment. Let's give landfill-bound plastic bags, bottles, and textiles a second life. Recycled polyester is made from the #1 type of plastic, often recycled plastic bottles.

HEMP BASEBALL CAP*Style No. EL046

Hemp fabric is high-yielding, not water or chemical intensive, and provides phytoremediation benefits to soil. It's considered a carbon negative raw material. It actually absorbs CO2 from the atmosphere, more so than your average plant. It also has so many wearable benefits, such as being naturally sun protective and antimicrobial.

ORGANIC COTTON BASEBALL CAP*Style No. EL0467

At the top of our sustainable fabrics list is organic cotton, one of the most natural fabrics out there. Unlike conventional cotton production, organic cotton is grown without pesticides and synthetic fertilizers and processed with no chemicals—overall using 62% less energy and 88% less water.

RECYCLED COTTON BASEBALL CAP*Style No. EL048

Recycled cotton is a best sustainable fabrics. Recycled cotton is produced using either post-industrial or post-consumer waste. This not only means no demand for cotton farming, but also means textile waste is diverted from landfills.

CORK BASEBALL CAP*Style No. EL049

Cork is sustainably harvested from a cork oak by simply shaving away the bark. In fact, Quercus suber can (and should) be harvested to extend its life. While the tree is regrowing the bark, it consumes more carbon dioxide than most types of trees, meaning cork plantations act as a carbon sink.
